City fireworks show Thursday

From Art Schroeder
Community Relations
Redevelopment &
Housing Agency
City of West Sacramento

It was on July 2, one year ago, when a spectacular outburst of fireworks punctuated the opening of the Daniel C. Palamidessi Bridge. A new event has been organized to repeat the excitement of last July 2. BridgeFest '98 is Thursday, July 2, 6 to 10 p.m. It's an evening of fireworks and live music, in the name of West Sacramento pride and progress. All the entertainment is again concentrated on the Daniel C. Palamidessi Bridge and the adjacent City Hall parking lot. Admission is free. BridgeFest '98 is sponsored by the Southport Industrial Park partnership of Ramco Enterprises and Summit Commercial. The West Sacramento Chamber of Commerce is coordinating the event, in association with the city of West Sacramento.

Providing the fireworks is Boom Boom Productions, which produced last year's pyro-spectacular. Nearly six hundred shells will be launched Thursday night, including two hundred shells for the grand finale alone. The fireworks will begin upon nightfall, between 9:15 and 9:30 p.m. Spectators are advised to bring blankets or folding chairs. The bridge will close to traffic at 4 p.m. Thursday and will not re-open until after 10 p.m.

Leading up to the sky show will be three hours of live music, beginning at 6 p.m. in the City Hall parking lot, 2101 Stone Boulevard. The line-up features The Roadmasters, Silhouette and Lucky and the High Rollers.

Free parking for BridgeFest '98 will be provided along Industrial Boulevard, north of the bridge. The public can access the parking area by taking Harbor Boulevard south to Industrial Boulevard, then turn left and proceed toward the Daniel C. Palamidessi Bridge.

Refreshments will be on sale during the event.

"In planning for BridgeFest '98, the West Sacramento Chamber of Commerce has really been proud of all the community cooperation," said Don Hill, the chamber's executive director. "Everyone in West Sacramento can look forward to a fun night of great music and exciting fireworks."

Honoring Old Glory

HOMER MORRIS and his Fourth of July decorations

If you can't wait for the fireworks at the Cal Expo July 4, just arrange to be in West Sacramento or fireworks on July 2.

And if you can't wait until July 2 for some Independence Day excitement, just go ahead and drive by the Park Blvd. home of Homer and Dorothy Morris.

The Morrises have decorated their home with flags, hats and banners to put West Sacramento into the proper spirit for the holiday commemmorating America's Declaration of Independence.

"We like to decorate for Christmas and all the holidays," said Homer Morris. He is known for the West Sacramento florist shop which he used to own and which still bears his first name. He and his wife have lived in West Sacramento since 1951 -- when they moved here on the Fourth of July.

"This was the first house on this side of Park Blvd. except for the old Hughes house," Morris reports.

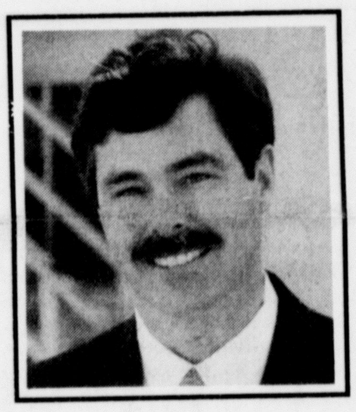

Cahill declares

West Sacramentan Jim Cahill, who narrowly missed winning a seat on the city council in 1996, has become the first to publicly declare his candidacy in the city's November, 1998, ballot.

"With the West Sacramento area economy booming and expectations high in the region, West Sacramento no longer has any excuse for its slow progress in providing the services the citizens demand," Cahill was quoted in a press release this week.

Cahill, 39, is a financial planner. He is a board member of the West Sacramento Foundation, a member of the West Sacramento Chamber of Commerce, former chair of the West Sacramento Planning Commission.

Filing period for candidacy is July 13-Aug. 7, and the seats held by Mayor Wes Beers and Vice Mayor Christopher Cabaldon will be on the ballot.

Washington Unified begins plans for school bond measure

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

Staff of the Washington Unified School District is putting together plans for a school bond measure, hoping for better results than the district obtained when bond measures went to vote and failed in 1991 and 1993.

The new plan will be assembled at the request of the district's school board, which accepted a recommendation of an appointed task force that such a bond was needed to build a new high school. The district's only current high school, River City High School on Clarendon St., is overcrowded, said Superintendent Dr. Dennis Kelleher.

"The school is designed for about 1,200 people," said Kelleher. "There are 1,400 kids there now, and by the time we get a new high school, we'll probably have 1,600 kids there. The problem is, you can keep putting portable buildings on it forever, but you've got your library, your gym, your cafeteria and your other common areas all not designed for that."

The district just built an elementary school (Southport Elementary School, on Linden Road) for about $5.5 million, out of the district's general fund. But the kind of dollars needed for a high school just don't lend themselves to the same approach, said Kelleher.

"A new high school costs $40-$50 million," he stated. "An elementary school sits on five or ten acres of land, and construction is simple. Every room is basically either a classroom or a bathroom. But for a high school, you have to have a vast amount of acreage for facilities like tennis courts, football and baseball fields, swimming pools, and special equipment like bunsen burners and ventilation hoods for science classes."

The resultant higher price tag means a school district has to look at alternative funding methods, such as construction money from the state (not available right now) or a school bond.

A school bond essentially works by requesting 2/3 approval from voters, allowing the district to sell bonds to investors and generate the immediate cash needed for construction. Property owners in the district would then be taxed to pay back the bonds.

Kelleher said that although the school board has accepted the need for such a bond for a new high school, everything else is up for discussion, from the dollar amount requested, to the list of items to be financed, to the scheduling of an election.

In 1991 and 1993, the district asked its voters for money to build the new high school (on one of several sites in the city's south large enough to support it) and to remodel the current River City High School into a middle school, relieving overcrowding at Golden State Middle School. That could happen again, said Kelleher, although the school board's decision to move the 6th grade out of the middle school and back to the district's elementary schools will itself relieve some of Golden State's overcrowding.

"By taking the districts 500 sixth graders out of the middle school, we've definitely bought some time," said Kelleher.

Kelleher stated that although some people would like to see a local school bond measure on the November, 1998, ballot, he believes the earliest time for a vote on a well-prepared plan and campaign would be the spring of 1999. Fall of 1999 might be even more realistic, he speculated.

The additional time might also give the district time to show the community that students' test scores are climbing, current facilities are being well-maintained, and the move of the sixth grade to the elementary schools is having a beneficial effect, Kelleher feels.

The dollar amount, specific bond construction goals, and election timing and strategy will all be worked out with the help of a new community to include residents and businesspeople. The committee's plan will then go to the school board for modification or approval. But Kelleher said his own view is that for a bond to succeed in this town, the new bond measure must contain provisions for facilities improvements in different areas of West Sacramento -- not just at the new Southport site for the high school.

"I feel the best way to get the support from the community is to have a bond very broadly based," he said. For instance, the bond might include provisions to fund a community center that might be used by senior citizens at Alyce Norman School.

"Obviously, we can't price ourselves out of the market, either," he cautioned.

About Town:

Chris Hasegawa, River City High's valedictorian

By Daryl Fisher
Features Editor

River City High School's 1998 senior class valedictorian is popular and friendly Chris Hasegawa.

"To be the class valedictorian is a high honor," said Chris, "and I'm very happy I was selected. But to tell you the truth, it's still kind of hard to believe, because I'm such a procrastinator when it comes to school work. I really enjoyed my years at River City, and being the class valedictorian definitely makes all the hard work worth it."

In Chris's valedictorian speech to his classmates on graduation night, he made special mention of his parents, Kenneth and Aileen Hasegawa.

"I would like to give special thanks to my parents, who have done for me throughout my life," said Chris. "The things my parents have done for me and told me will always be with me. They were always there to make me laugh, to give me advice, to talk to me, and to motivate me. I know I probably will never be able to pay back all that was done for me throughout my life, but I want all my family to know that it was truly appreciated."

Although Chris is very pleased with how well his young life has gone, he is also aware of the difficult times his parents and grandparents had to endure.

"My father was born in an Army internment camp in Jerome, Arkansas," recalled Chris. "He and my grandparents had been sent there from California during World War Two because they were Japanese."

"After the war," remembered Chris' father, "we went back to Japan and lived in Hiroshima for ten years. There was very little food and shelter, so we returned to the United States and I later

Teen's body discovered

Thursday morning at about 8:30 a.m., a jogger found the body of a female in Babel Slough, near Babel Slough Road in Clarksburg. The Yolo County Sheriff-Coroner's Office has determined the cause of the woman's death to be asphyxiation due to suffocation.

The woman's head and face were wrapped in a material which may have caused the suffocation.

The victim was partly clothed and showed no evidence of sexual assault. She had been dead an estimated two to five days before being found. The case is being treated as a homicide, and Yolo authorities are working with the state Department of Justice to identify her.

The victim is described as Asian, in her late teens, about 5' 2" and 110 pounds.

Anyone with information is asked to call the Sheriff's Department at (530) 668-5280.

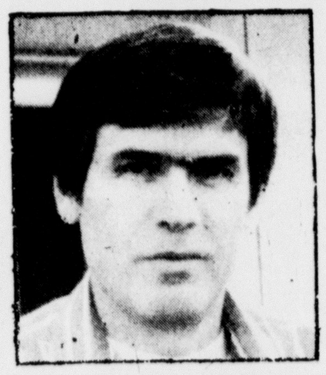

Private fireworks illegal in West Sac

West Sacramento residents are reminded that all fireworks are illegal within city limits, with the exception of specially permitted public exhibitions such as the city and chamber of commerce-sponsored event Thursday evening.

Thursday's show will be the only legal fireworks display during the Fourth of July holiday period in West Sacramento. Viewing from the new Daniel C. Palamidessi Bridge is free to the public.

Some insights into the life of your typical redneck

My Back Pages

By Daryl Fisher

I have a friend who likes to think of himself as a redneck. Actually, he's lived on the West Coast for most of his life, but it doesn't take much to get him started talking about all the wonders of Dixieland. His good ol' boy routine is really quite interesting, especially when he throws in the accent that he has mostly lost and begins talking about how cheap everything is down South. To hear him tell it, everything is about half-price below the Mason-Dixon line, especially the real estate. He also swears the women are much nicer in the South -- not to mention better looking. His reason for moving north is quite simple -- "My parents dragged me out here kicking and screaming! I had no choice."

My friend's job is what keeps him in California, but he tries to visit his beloved Dixieland as often as he can. In fact, he's back there right now, which means, that with a little luck, I can go ahead and write this column without him ever knowing I did it.

What actually got me thinking about my friend (I'll call him Eddie) was a little book I saw awhile back entitled, "The Official Redneck Handbook", and here are just a few of that book's insights which I intend to discuss at length with Eddie when I see him next:

Tips for helping a Yankee blend in with Southern living: Buy a pickup truck that is at least ten years old; add a gun rack across the rear window; take a pair of your baby shoes and the tassel from your high school graduation cap and hang them on the rear view mirror; buy a used guitar and learn a couple of songs before you get there; learn to spit a lot; and stop paying your child support payments on time.

Learn how to properly pronounce words: Well should be 'Wail'; Correct should be 'Kreck'; Fire should be 'Far'; Did you ever should be 'Jevver'; Coca-cola should be 'Cocoler'; Oil should be 'All'; Borrowed should be 'Bard'; Tired should be 'Tarred'; Iron should be 'Arn'; Far should be 'Fur'; Exactly should be 'Zackly'; Marriage should be 'Madge'; and Sandwich should be 'Sammitch'.

Be aware of the bare redneck necessities: You'll need one or two dogs of questionable pedigree; a loud muffler and preferably a tailpipe that drags along the ground; one 4 x 6 Confederate flag; one belt buckle no smaller than a large pizza; a tape player and plenty of Willie Nelson, Hank Williams, Jr., Johnny Cash and Alabama tapes; a week's supply of white socks; one Zippo cigarette lighter -- even if you don't smoke; a tattoo of a woman's name, preferably one you haven't seen in years; and an Army fatigue jacket with the insignia removed.

You need to become an expert on the following: Huntin'; fishin'; barbequin'; stock car racin'; women; crap shootin'; arm rasslin'; pocket knives; killing rattlesnakes; square dancin'; frog giggin'; automobile, truck, and motorcycle repair; and turkey shoots.

Your front yard should have: a tire swing hanging from a tree; several chickens and a cat or two on the steps and porch; the remains of a white picket fence out by the road; one set of rusty bedsprings behind the utility shed; two fishing poles leaning against the side of the garage; three or four young 'uns hanging from a tree; and one inflatable swimming pool, long ago deflated and now filled with pine needles and tadpoles.

You'll know you're in a Southern town when: third street is out on the edge of town; the editor and publisher (the same person) of the weekly newspaper carries a camera at all times; you know the name of each dog that passes you; you can't walk for exercise because every car that passes offers you a ride; you miss church one Sunday and receive a get well card on Monday; the doctor still makes house calls; there are more people standing on the sidewalk in front of the stores talking than there are inside shopping; and "Pot" is still that little item that sits under the edge of the bed.

You'll also need to know a few basic Southern superstitions: Sleep with a mirror under your pillow and you will see your future husband; run into a cobweb and you'll get a letter; killing a ladybug brings bad luck; look under a bed and you'll never marry; forget to wash a skillet and you can expect a guest for the next meal; when fish jump above the water, look for rain; carry in your pocket a button you've found and it will bring you good luck; and if you swim in the ocean on January 1, you won't be sick all year.

Finally, if you really want to be a redneck, you must: learn to tell the difference between a possum and an coon; carry a pocket knife; give all your children nicknames, or call them by their initials; hang out at gas stations; play a lot of pool; get a dog that will wait for you in the bed of your pickup; call all females except your mama "gals"; learn everything you can about Robert E. Lee; cash your paycheck at the nearest 7-11 store; never work on the opening day of deer or dove season; and always say "Yes, ma'am" and "No ma'am" to your mother.

Groundbreaking for seniors' residence

From Art Schroeder
Community Relations
Redevelopment & Housing Agency
City of West Sacramento

Construction will soon begin at Margaret McDowell Manor. The development of new, affordable housing for seniors takes a major step forward with the official ground breaking ceremony, scheduled for Friday, July 10, at 10:30 a.m. The location is 1525 Merkley Ave., just west of the US Bank. Mayor Wesley A. Beers will join members of the senior community, local officials and project representatives in marking the beginning of construction for the 87-unit complex.

Developed in partnership with the city's Redevelopment Agency, Christian Church Homes of Northern California and Margaret McDowell Associates, Margaret McDowell Manor expects occupancy by spring of next year. The two- and three-story building of primarily one bedroom units will surround an interior courtyard. Elevators will offer easy access throughout the residence and security gates will provide peace-of-mind. A community room and laundry room will be among the special facilities. Other features include wide entry ways and abundant lighting to meet the independent living needs of today's seniors. A West Sacramento firm, Brown Construction, will manage the construction of the project.

Funding for Margaret McDowell Manor was provided by development and construction grants approved by the US Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) and the State Department of Housing and Community Development. In 1995, the city received a $950,000 HOME grant for the project. The following year, the project developer, Christian Church Homes, was awarded a $5.7 million grant in HUD 202 funding. Additional funds were provided by the West Sacramento Redevelopment Agency.

For residence information, write to Christian Church Homes, 303 Hegenberger Road, Suite 201, Oakland, CA, 94621.

Boris E. Yankoff

Retired U.S. Army Captain Boris E. Yankoff, who helped capture the first U.S. prisoner of war in W.W. II and lived in West Sacramento for about 20 years, died in Davis July 18. He was 83.

Mr. Yankoff's army squad was on patrol near Honolulu one day after the Dec. 7, 1941, attack on Pearl Harbor when they found Japanese Navy Ensign Kazuo Sakamaki, who had washed up on the beach after his midget sub ran aground on a reef. Sakamaki spent the war in custody.

Mr. Yankoff fought in Pacific island campaigns during the war and served on Gen. Douglas MacArthur's intelligence staff and later the 82nd Airborne Division, fighting in the Korean War. He retired from the Army in 1954 and settled in Yolo County.

A native of Russia, Yankoff and his family fled Siberia after the Bolshevik revolution. Mr. Yankoff received schooling in China and learned to bos there, serving briefly with a Chinese military unit after the Japanese invasion in the 1930s. In the Army he was a welterweight boxing champion; he coached the All Army Boxing team in 1951 and later coached at Sacramenot State.

In the 1960s and 1970s, Mr. Yankoff became a celebrity by making several 222-mile marches across the Death Valley during the summer, publicizing the suffering of U.S. military men captured or missing in Vietnam. One such hike took six days and 22 hours.

He was an avid physical fitness buff and long distance runner.

Mr. Yankoff served for a time as house detective at West Sacramento's El Rancho Hotel, now a Buddhist monastery.

Divorced from his first wife, Mr. Yankoff married Thelma McGrew Yankoff, who died in 1993. He is survived by stepson A. Cleon Hankins of West Sacramento; by daughters Nidya Shields of Los Angeles and Galena Bearden Yankoff of Petaluma, and by four grandchildren.

Planners to discuss Jefferson Blvd. commercial increase

From News-Ledger Staff

At a planning commission meeting tonight (July 1) at city hall, city staff will recommend an increase in the amount of commercial zoning in the triangle surrounded by Jefferson Blvd., Davis Rd. and Gregory Ave. from one to two acres.

Landowners Vince Frugoli and partners had asked that more of the 13-acre site be designated for commercial use, although the Southport Framework Plan had generally restricted commercial zoning to future "village" areas.

City planning director Stephen Patek, in his report to the commission, stated that increasing the acreage to up to two acres can be done with data already in hand. But to consider alternatives of five or ten acres of commercial at the site, which some planning commissioners appeared interested in at the commission's May 7 meeting, would necessitate additional traffic studies. City staff had opposed increasing the commercial zoning.

Also on the planning commission agenda will be consideration of an application for a conditional use permit for a 65-foot high multi-user sign 625 feet north of U.S. 50 and 225 feet from the Harbor Blvd./Evergreen Ave. intersection. The applicant is River City Signs.

The meeting will take place at 6 p.m.

Next week, the planning commission (which usually meets on Thursdays) will hold a special meeting at 6 p.m. on Tuesday, July 7, to consider what city staff terms "minor amendments" to the city's development agreement with the 640-acre Southport Industrial Park project. The commission will be asked to recommend the changes to the city council for discussion at the council meeting July 8.

Yolo courts unify

Yolo County Judges have unanimously voted to unify the superior and municipal courts into a superior court following passage of Proposition 220. This court will be known as the Superior Court of Yolo County.

Proposition 220 permits the judges in each county to create a "unified" or single superior court if a majority of superior court judges and a majority of municipal court judges with the county so vote. Yolo joins the courts in 18 California counties in taking this action.

"Yolo Courts have earned the respect of judges and court officials throughout California for our innovative programs," said Court Executive Officer Yolande Williams. "Our specialized domestic violence and drug courts are mentor programs which have attracted favorable comment from both State and Federal Officials. Formal unification will help to assure the judicial resources to meet not only today's needs but also those which we will have to address in the future."

The new Yolo Superior Court Judges are Timothy L. Fall (Department 2), W. Arvid Johnson (Department 8), Williams S. Lebov (Department 5), and Thomas E. Warriner (Department 7).

joined the Air Force. It was while I was in the Air Force that I met my wife, and we moved to this area to study and work and raise our children."

Chris has two brothers, Fred and Jeff, and one sister, Patty. Fred is in college, Jeff is in Japan studying his native tongue, and Patty is an airline stewardest. "I'm proud of all my children," said Kenneth. "They are good kids and they have never given us any problems. I think most of the credit for that should go to my wife, Aileen, who has spent so much of her time raising them. Chris is a very quiet and modest boy, and he didn't even tell us he was the class valedictorian. We didn't find out until we got to the graduation ceremonies. Everyone is very proud of him, though."

Another important influence on Chris's life has been the Tenrikyo Church that his father has ministered for over twenty years. In Chris's valedictorian speech, he said, "There is one last piece of advice I have learned through my adolescent life that I would like to share with all of you. No matter what happens in your future, learn to have fun and be positive. That means, instead of focusing on all the negative aspects of your life, be grateful for all the positive aspects and enjoy living."

The Tenrikyo religion, which recently celebrated its 200th anniversary in Tenri, Japan, often refers to the importance of working towards the Joyous Life. Miki Nakayama, the founder of Tenrikyo, emphasized the brotherhood and equality of all human beings. The basic thrust of her message was that humankind was created for the purpose of living a life of joy. Tenrikyo followers are expected to set aside their own interests and work for the salvation of others. They are also to reject miserliness, hatred, self-love, grudge-bearing, anger, greed and arrogance. "My father disciplined us into a very tight knit family," said Chris, "and his religious beliefs were a big part of that."

CHRIS HASEGAWA also plays hoops. . .

Chris will be attending the University of California at San Diego in the fall.

"I really like that part of California," said Chris, "and I'm looking forward to the experience of living away from home. I plan on becoming an electrical engineer and the University of California at San Diego has a really good electrical engineering program. The federal government provides much of the equipment and technology I'll be using, and I'm sure I'll get a very good education there."

Chris concluded his valedictorian speech with the following words: "Everybody, enjoy life and have fun, because I know I'm going to be having fun in the sun down in San Diego."

OPINION

News-Ledger Editorial:

Tough sell

No one could envy the officials of West Sacramento's school district as they plan to try again to pass a school bond. Earlier this decade they tried twice to do the same thing. In 1991, a bond measure of more than $90 million to try to build a new high school and convert the current one to a middle school failed by a margin of over 10 percent to reach the 2/3 level of voters' approval. Hoping to learn from their mistakes, district officials tried again in 1993 with a smaller bond measure and a better campaign.

Their reward? About another half-percent of the ballots.

West Sacramento needs a new high school, and a bond measure is the only way to get it. But such a measure is a tough sell in this community of many retirees and others who do not wish to add to their property taxes in order to pay for one. They either don't believe they can afford a bond, or don't believe that the indirect benefits of better school facilities (a higher quality of new growth, more local disposable income and retail opportunities, lower crime, etc.) will affect them.

There's a "Catch-22" here: families who care about their kids' education are reluctant to move to West Sacramento until the local facilities problem is fixed, but the bond measure to fix it might not pass until there are more families who care about their kids' education living in West Sacramento.

The solution to this problem still has not been invented for West Sacramento.

Speak up about the homework problem

By Ray Cushing
Sacramento

A few weeks ago Newsweek reported that educational experts are discovering that homework at the elementary level is a waste of time. Homework doesn't increase a child's learning and it doesn't prepare him or her for higher education.

The Newsweek article stated that at the middle school level, homework can be beneficial, but that teachers rarely assign the most enriching types of homework: self-directed projects that allow the student free reign in researching and presenting the material.

In too many classrooms, those in West Sacramento included, teachers send students home with "mountains of mimeos," assignments photocopied from some mass-produced teacher's guide. At Golden State Middle School, it's not unusual for kids to bring home work of this type that requires an hour and half or more to complete.

What's the point? Eleven-, twelve- and thirteen-year-olds at Golden State already are putting in eight hours per day getting ready for school and sitting in the classroom. Add to that 60 or 90 minutes of homework and these kids are at the point where they would be getting paid time-and-a-half in the real world. Kids who participate in sports or other extracurriculars are looking at a 12-hour-day.

Why do we demand so much of our kids? An 11-year-old is supposed to get 10 hours of sleep most nights to stay in top form. Combine that with a 10-hour school day and that leaves four hours a day for Junior or Sis to spend with their family. Mom and Dad don't get home til 5:30 and they're dead tired. After a quick bite to eat it's time to start on the homework. (Much of the homework requires parental assistance.) This goes on five nights a week.

Homework is intrusive and it detracts from family life. Most homework doesn't reinforce learning but just creates stress and exhaustion. An obvious question that rarely gets asked at school board meetings is: Why can't each subject be taught in the 45 minutes per day allotted?

The Washington Unified School District should take up the question of homework at its earliest opportunity. Parents in West Sacramento want to know: Why can't teachers teach the material during school time and leave after-school hours to families?

Ray Cushing, a former editor of a West Sacramento newspaper, is the founder of the Anti-Homework League. He can be reached at 558-4980 or by e-mail at rayc@cal-biz.com.

Small businesses needed

All of ("About Town," News-Ledger) interviews by Daryl Fisher have been interesting, positive and confirming that West Sacramento is a good place in which to live. We have retained some of the good qualities of a small town with neighbors and friends and some quality businesses.

The one on the Gorman family last week evoked memories of what we lost (though we did meld our three historic communities of Broderick, Bryte and West Sacramento). We used to have a downtown with the ability to shop here. While we still have time, should we not meet together with our City Planners and our businesses to confirm the need for a downtown center with a City Hall, etc., and retain good, small businesses? Imagine a Staples or a Walmart and other box stores, with no small businesses. What we might gain in a few cheaper articles we will lose in the quality of life.

Stop the violence

There isn't a day that goes by that we don't hear or read about acts of violence occurring in our community. Many of us shake our heads in dismay and wonder "when it will ever end?" While we feel bad for the victims, most of us hope that we never have to experience the pain of a violent assault.

Unfortunately, violence happens to more of us than anyone might imagine. It may not be discussed openly nor is every act reported in the news. That's because the most common and widespread epidemic of violence is happening right in our homes. In one year alone, 4 million American women suffer physical abuse at the hands of an intimate partner. Over the span of a lifetime, women currently have a 1 in 3 chance of being abused by a partner. Domestic violence occurs in all areas to persons from every culture, race, age, religion, sexual orientation, educational and economic background. Your teenaged daughter may become the one in four girls who suffer abuse in a dating relationship. With these facts and figures in mind, there is a good chance that you know someone who has been affected by domestic violence. That someone may even be you.

It is time to break the silence about domestic violence and help put an end to it. The good news is that it is possible to prevent this kind of pain.

WEAVE, the non-profit agency in Sacramento County providing domestic violence and sexual assault services, and KVIE Public Television are working together to break the silence about domestic violence and need people from all walks of life to get involved. The campaign is called "Break the Silence on Domestic Violence" and its focus is on increasing awareness of domestic violence in the Sacramento region and engaging individuals to take some safe, effective action.

If you have not experienced domestic violence personally or you don't know anyone who has, you might wonder how domestic violence impacts you. Why should you get concerned about this problem if it has not and will not touch your life? If you have a daughter, sister, aunt, mother, grandmother, or a female friend, there is a chance it will touch your life. And, if you are concerned about violence on the streets, then you need to be concerned about domestic violence. It's been shown that children who witness domestic violence while growing up are much more likely to repeat the violence in their own lives. The violent criminals of tomorrow are today's children who are living with domestic violence in their homes. If there is no help, no interruption of the cycle of violence, these innocent children will grow up to abuse themselves with drugs and alcohol and to abuse others with their words, fists and weapons. That is why it makes sense for each of us to care about ending domestic violence. Only after homes and families are free of abuse will our streets ever be safer for all of us.

Some of us shield our children from the news or even refuse to watch the evening news ourselves because it "is too depressing." We want a more peaceful society, yet, by ignoring domestic violence or simply wishing it would go away, we help to perpetuate it.

It is time to say that domestic violence will not be passed onto the next generation. You have the chance to make it a reality. When you call the Break the Silence on Domestic Violence toll-free number, 1-888-303-4500, you'll receive a free, confidential action kit with information on ways to get involved and make a difference in your community. Won't you become part of the solution to a safer community?

Paulhamus honored for preservation

Lana Paulhamus, who helped lead the successful fight to save the historic firehouse at 317 C St. in West Sacramento, received the "Art Deco Preservationist of the Year" award from the Sacramento Art Deco Society at a ceremony June 27 at the Ryde Hotel.

"Art Deco" style is famous for the streamlined, curved designs popularized in the 1920s-40s. The old "Washington" firehouse was built as part of Franklin Delano Roosevelt's New Deal program in 1940, and is now disused. In 1997, it was slated for destruction. City officials are now examining new uses for the building.

"It can still be threatened by nonuse, by vagrancy, fire -- something can happen to it," said Paulhamus. "It's been close to a year, and we have not heard anything."

The award was presented by Richard Unger, president of the Sacramento Art Deco Society.

Music Circus plans casting for coming seven-show season

The pace accelerated this week at Sacramento Light Opera Association as California's largest nonprofit musical theater company moved into the final stages of casting for its upcoming seven-show Music Circus season.

Sacramento's unique theater-in-a-tent will once again showcase leading actors from across the nation. Some favorites from seasons past, others are newcomers, eager to experience the special magic that makes Music Circus a legend among professional theater artists.

Stephanie Block, who made her tent debut last year in "Damn Yankees" and Bob Walton, who appeared on Broadway in "Show Boat," will charm audiences in the Gershwin song and dance sensation, Crazy for You.

Mary Gordon Murray, who many will recognize as "Applegate" and Mylinda Hull as "Lola" in last summer's "Damn Yankees," return with Stephen Zinnato, who portrayed Gaston in Disney's production of "Beauty and the Beast," will star in The Pajama Game, the love story that interferes with a union strike.

To mock and make light of the terrors of pre-Hitler Berlin, Francis Jue will recreate award winning performances as the Emcee, and Nancy Ringham will recreate her role as Sally Bowles in Cabaret. Meanwhile, Nat Chandler from last summer's "Desert Song," Lenny Wolpe from previous Music Circus performances including "Fiddler on the Roof," and Kurt Johnson, making his tent debut, will display the bitter truth that Sally and the Emcee choose to ignore.

Eric Kunze, who audiences will recognize as Joe Hardy from the 1997 production of "Damn Yankees," will return to the tent to portray Joseph in Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat. Philip Anthony who may be remembered as Julio in the Music Circus production of "Paint Your Wagon" will play the part of The Pharaoh who takes Joseph in after his brothers sell him into slavery. The story will be narrated by Mary Gordon Murray.

Sarah Tattersall, a Music Circus favorite for her performance as Eliza in "My Fair Lady," will return to the tent as Fiona, a Scottish lass who lives in Brigaddon, a city only seen by the rest of the world once every hundred years. Michael Piontek who portrayed Raoul in "Phantom of the Opera" will make his tent debut as Tommy, who is destined to love Fiona, but unfortunately, from the outside world.

Joseph Mahowald, last seen in Sacramento as Lt. Cable in "South Pacific," will return as Adam, a man with six brothers and a housekeeping problem, who marries Milly, played by Rachel de Benedet, who was last in Sacramento in "Kiss Me Kate." In Seven Brides for Seven Brothers, Milly teaches Adam and his brothers that you must woo a wife, not just marry her.

Susan Egan, Tony Award nominee for her performance as Belle in "Beauty and the Beast," will wash Vernon Hartman, a bass-baritone soloist with the Metropolitan Opera, right out of her hair in South Pacific. Linda Thompson-Williams, who also sings with the Metropolitan Opera, will make her tent debut as Bloody Mary, and Gary Beach, who was a Tony Award nominee for his performance as Lumiere in "Beauty and the Beast," will return to the tent as Luther Billis.

The complete schedule for the Music Circus season is Crazy for You, July 13-19; The Pajama Game, July 20-26; Cabaret, July 27-August 2; Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat, August 3-9; Brigadoon, August 10-16; Seven Brides for Seven Brothers, August 17-23; and South Pacific, August 24-30.

Tickets for all productions are priced at $22 to $40, depending on time and location and are on sale now at the Music Circus box office, 1419 H Street, or by phone at (916) 557-1999; or at any BASS ticket outlet, (916) 923-BASS.

Cheer heroes, boo villains at WOH melodrama

The Woodland Opera House will present its second annual Summer Melodrama, No Opera at the Op'ry House Tonight. The play, written by Tim Kelly, follows the fortunes of the second rate Salami Opera Company. The group is destitute and stranded in a dusty hamlet where the local opera house doubles as a cattle auction. The beautiful prima dona, Alma Pumpernickel, is being pursued by the evil nobleman, Baron Wolfgang von Wolfpack, but secretly loves Billy Bright, a composer so poor that he can't afford a piano, so he hums. Evil villains, noble heros, odd supporting characters, and bad jokes make for a lively evening of fun. Audience participation is encouraged and expected. Performances are scheduled for Friday and Saturday nights at 8 p.m. and Sundays at 2 p.m. Children are free on opening night when accompanied by an adult. Tickets are reserved and priced at $10 adults and $8 seniors 55 and older. All balcony seats are $5. Group rates for 10 or more are available with block seating. For more information or to reserve seats call WOH box office at 666-9617.

From the DMV:

Restrictions apply to new drivers after July 1

Sixteen and seventeen-year-olds applying for an instructional permit/driver license on and after July 1, face increased restrictions designed to lower the high rate of teen fatalities on the road.

They will have to hold their instructional permit for six months before they can take a drive test for their provisional license. Previously the law specified 30 days.

The law says they can't drive between midnight and 5 a.m. for the first year they hold the license unless supervised by a parent, guardian, driving instructor or adult age 25 or older. It also specifies they can't transport passengers under 20 years of age for the first six months, unless supervised.

During the second six months they may transport passengers of any age from 5 a.m. to midnight without supervision.

According to California Department of Motor Vehicles statistics, sixteen-year-olds have the worst driving record of any age group. They are 5.4 times more likely to be at fault in a fatal or injury accident than all drivers. Seventeen-year-olds fall into second place with a ratio 3.7 times higher than average drivers.

During the instructional permit period the prospective driver must have 50 hours of adult-supervised driving practice, 10 of which must be at night.

"These are common sense restrictions that affect the times and situations when teens are in the most danger," says DMV Director Sally Reed. She noted that some concerned parents already impose the restrictions because "they make good sense."

Those who apply for an instructional permit prior to July 1 will not be subject to the new restrictions.

These conditions add to restrictions already in place on the provisional licenses issued to sixteen and seventeen-year-olds in California. Under current law, they face a 30 day suspension if they collect two violation points in 12 months. They face a six month suspension if they reach three points in 12 months. These provisions were not impacted by the new law and remain in place.

Regular tickets and at-fault accidents count one point. More serious violations such as DUI, reckless driving and speed contests count two points.

County surveys tobacco sales

From the Yolo County Health Department

Even though California law forbids the sale of cigarettes to minors, illegal sales are occurring in about 20 out of 100 buys statewide and Yolo County youth will be surveying the prevalence of this problem locally. In the near future, youth volunteers will attempt to purchase cigarettes in gas stations, convenience and small grocery stores in West Sacramento. The youth will be working with the Health Department and have collaborated with law enforcement.

Recently, a merchant education project targeted at reducing youth access to tobacco was provided through the Yolo County Health Department -- Tobacco Education Program. This project has been effective in reducing the illegal sale of tobacco products to minors and also reducing store tobacco ads and promotional items. It was been documented that tobacco industry advertising is successful in influencing underage youth to purchase tobacco products.

Responding to the ease at which children could buy cigarettes and the growing number of young smokers, Congress passed the federal legislation (Synar Amendment) requiring each state to document the reduction of tobacco sales to minors or risk losing federal funding. The Health Department's Youth Purchase Surveys are one local agency's collaborative effort with the community to curb the illegal sale of tobacco products to minors.

This periodic surveying is necessary to sample the effectiveness of the merchant education project and assess the local compliance rate.

Carolyn Butler, aide and three students also reported on how the program has turned them around.
